Kath's Theatre.
No attraction offered at Kath's has created half the talk, or excited the imagination of the patrons of that popular resort, as the advent of the Hungarian boys' band, which is in several respects the most wonderful musical organization that has ever visited this country.
The band is made up of three dozen players, most of whom, as they sit in the high black and white uniforms, do not touch the stage floor. And they play like magicians. The music is of many pretty melodies. The Hungarian orchestra arrangements are given with a precision and accuracy that would be wonderful in itself, and some of the marches are rendered with such a swing and dash that the music might play well for youngsters; that is music except that of military band.
